True-false statements – Causes

Date: _____

Read the article, then read each statement and write "T" for true or "F" for false.

School violence is a complex issue influenced by various factors, including peer pressure and family dynamics. Peer pressure can compel students to conform to aggressive behaviors to gain acceptance among their peers. This influence may lead those who typically wouldn't act violently to engage in harmful actions.

Family dynamics significantly shape a child's behavior. Supportive families foster healthy emotional development, while negative relationships, such as instability or poor communication, can result in anger and frustration, potentially leading to violence at school.

Children who feel isolated are more susceptible to negative peer influences, making family support vital in helping them navigate these challenges. By addressing peer pressure and promoting healthy family interactions, we can work toward reducing school violence and creating safer environments for students.

Statements

1. Peer pressure can cause students to engage in violent behavior. ____
2. A supportive family always guarantees a child will not exhibit violent behavior. ____
3. Children who feel accepted by their peers are less likely to experience peer pressure. ____
4. Positive peer influences can help reduce school violence. ____
5. All peer interactions result in positive outcomes for students. ____
6. Children who feel isolated are less likely to be influenced by negative peers. ____
7. Violence at school is solely caused by external factors, not family dynamics. ____
8. Children with supportive families are more resilient against negative influences. ____
9. Healthy family interactions can help prevent school violence. ____
10. Poor communication in families can contribute to violent behavior at school. ____

Juicy English.com

True-false statements – Causes Date: _____

Read the article, then read each statement and write "T" for true or "F" for false.

School violence is a complex issue influenced by various factors, including peer pressure and family dynamics. Peer pressure can compel students to conform to aggressive behaviors to gain acceptance among their peers. This influence may lead those who typically wouldn't act violently to engage in harmful actions.

Family dynamics significantly shape a child's behavior. Supportive families foster healthy emotional development, while negative relationships, such as instability or poor communication, can result in anger and frustration, potentially leading to violence at school.

Children who feel isolated are more susceptible to negative peer influences, making family support vital in helping them navigate these challenges. By addressing peer pressure and promoting healthy family interactions, we can work toward reducing school violence and creating safer environments for students.

Statements

1. Peer pressure can cause students to engage in violent behavior. ____
2. A supportive family always guarantees a child will not exhibit violent behavior. ____
3. Children who feel accepted by their peers are less likely to experience peer pressure. ____
4. Positive peer influences can help reduce school violence. ____
5. All peer interactions result in positive outcomes for students. ____
6. Children who feel isolated are less likely to be influenced by negative peers. ____
7. Violence at school is solely caused by external factors, not family dynamics. ____
8. Children with supportive families are more resilient against negative influences. ____
9. Healthy family interactions can help prevent school violence. ____
10. Poor communication in families can contribute to violent behavior at school. ____

For more Free Worksheets, PowerPoint presentations and more visit www.juicyenglish.com now!