Paragraph 1	There was a married couple who lived in a little cottage, located on the edge of a main road. They had two daughters who were both twin girls. The little girls never fought or argued . They were happy together and hated to be separated.
Paragraph 2	One day, the mother had to go to the shop and buy some milk and bread. She didn't want to leave the girls on their own so she took them with her. Grasping both girls by the hand, the mother led them across the busy road.
Paragraph 3	Unfortunately, the mother had forgotten to look both ways before she crossed the street. Just as they neared the other side, she heard a loud screech and then a horrible sound as her daughters' tiny hands were torn out of her grasp.
Paragraph 4	When the mother twirled around to look , she screamed in horror at what she saw and collapsed on the sidewalk. The twin girls had been run over by a huge truck. The bloody remains of the twin girls were splattered across the road.
Paragraph 5	The mother began crying and sobbing hysterically. Try as she might, she couldn't tear her eyes away from the two big streaks of red that stained the road. At the funeral the father tried to comfort his wife, but she was inconsolable. Over and over, she screamed "This is all my fault! This is all my fault!"
Paragraph 6	Four years later, the mother and father still lived in the same house beside the road where their daughters died . The woman became pregnant again. The couple was surprised when the doctors told them that they would be having twins again.
Paragraph 7	The parents were happy when their two little girls were born. This happy event caused the mother to forget the tragedy of the past. As the twin girls grew up , their mother and father were careful never to mention the previous children. They acted as if the deceased girls had never existed . One day, the two little twin girls were playing in the garden. Their mother came out and told them to come with her to the shop. As they stood at the edge of the road, the mother took the hands of the two girls and held them tightly.
Paragraph 8	Suddenly, as the mother began walking across the road, the girls began to struggle and tried to slip out of their mother's grasp. "No, Mommy! Don't hold us! " cried the twin girls in unison. "We don't want to die again!"

Paragraph 1	There was a 6-year old little girl named Holly who lived with her parents. Her parents decided to go out to celebrate their anniversary, so they found a babysitter for their daughter. The babysitter, named Jessica, arrived to take care of Holly. The parents gave her their phone numbers and left the two girls alone in the house.
Paragraph 2	Holly asked Jessica for some ice cream. Jessica agreed and went down to the basement to get it. As Jessica searched through the freezer, she noticed a little girl at the window. She went back upstairs and gave Holly her ice cream.
Paragraph 3	Holly wanted chocolate syrup on her ice cream, so Jessica went to the basement once more to get it. Again, she saw the little girl. This time, she noticed the girl had on a creepy red and black mask with sharp teeth on it. Jessica went back up the stairs and returned to Holly.
Paragraph 4	Holly asked for sprinkles on her ice cream, so Jessica had to return to the basement another time. When she looked out the window and at the little girl with the mask, she noticed she had a knife in her hand. Jessica got nervous and went back up the stairs.
Paragraph 5	Holly now wanted a cherry for her ice cream. When Jessica arrived at the basement, she saw that the little girl wasn't there anymore. Jessica was relieved, and she returned upstairs. When she got there, Jessica saw Holly dead on the table. Her throat had been cut . Jessica called the police and waited for them and Holly's parents to arrive .
Paragraph 6	When the parents got to the house, Jessica explained and apologized to them. She told them about the little girl in the basement window and the knife she had . When she finished , the parents told Jessica that it was impossible. There were no windows in the basement – only a mirror.

Paragraph 1	She lived in the forest in a tiny cottage and sold herbal remedies for a living. The folks who live in the town nearby called her Bloody Mary, and said she was a witch. No one dared cross the forest for fear that their cows would die , their children would get sick of fever, or any number of terrible things that an angry witch could do to her neighbors.
Paragraph 2	Then the little girls in the village began to disappear , one by one. No one could find out where they had gone. The worried families searched the woods, the local buildings, and all the houses and barns, but there was no sign of the missing girls.
Paragraph 3	A few brave souls even went to Bloody Mary's home in the woods to see if the witch had taken the girls, but she denied any knowledge of the disappearances. Still, it was noted that her haggard appearance had changed. She looked younger, more attractive. The neighbors were suspicious, but they could find no proof that the witch had taken their young ones.
Paragraph 4	Then came the night when the daughter of the miller rose from her bed and walked outside, following an enchanted sound no one else could hear . The miller's wife had a toothache and was in the kitchen treating the tooth with an herbal remedy when her daughter left the house. She screamed for her husband and followed the girl out of the door. Together, they tried to stop the girl, but it was impossible.
Paragraph 5	The desperate cries of the miller and his wife woke the neighbors. They came to assist the frantic couple. Suddenly, a sharp-eyed farmer gave a shout and pointed towards a strange light at the edge of the woods.
Paragraph 6	A few townsmen followed him out into the field and saw Bloody Mary standing beside a large oak tree, holding a magic wand that was pointed towards the miller's house. She was glowing with an unearthly light as she set her evil spell upon the miller's daughter.
Paragraph 7	The townsmen grabbed their guns and their pitchforks and ran toward the witch. When she heard the commotion, Bloody Mary broke off her spell and ran away .
Paragraph 8	A farmer had loaded his gun with silver bullets in case the witch ever came after his daughter. Now he took aim and shot at her. The bullet hit Bloody Mary in the hip and she fell to the ground. The angry townsmen carried her back into the field, where they built a huge bonfire and burned her at the stake.
Paragraph 9	As she burned, Bloody Mary screamed a curse at the villagers. If anyone mentioned her name aloud before a mirror, she would send her spirit to revenge herself upon them for her terrible death. When she was dead, the villagers went to the house in the wood and found the unmarked graves of the little girls who the evil witch had murdered . She had used their blood to make her young again.
